Cardinals vs. Seahawks live channel, start time Etals vs. Seahawks live coverage is scheduled to start at 8:20 p.m PM ET/5:20 p.m PM Thursday, November 19 on FOX, NFL Network, and Amazon. It's time for the Cardinals vs. Seahawks live stream, which is here to secure a rematch between the two leading NFC West teams. They last met in Week 7 when the Cardinals eked out a 37-34 victory in overtime. Both teams have taken a few blows in the NFL live stream, with Cards narrowly losing to the Dolphins and Seahawks in both the Buffalo Bills and LA Rams. Having lost three of their last four games, the 6-3 Seahawks will be looking for redemption, and bookmakers expect them to reach, with a 3-point spread by the home team. But Arizona, also boasting a 6-3 record (and leading the NFC West), is a stronger team of late. All eyes will be on Seahawks quarterback Russell Wilson in the NFL live. When Wilson is on, the Seahawks win. But last week's game was his worst of the season – with two interceptions, a fumble, six sacks, and (for the first time all season) not a one-scoring pass. By comparison, Cardinals teammate Kyle Murray had an exceptionally good game against the Buffalo Bills, culminating in a Hail Mary pass to triple-on wide receiver DeAndre Hopkins in the last two seconds. Murray also had 11 carries for 61 yards and two scores. Buffalo also had to contend with rushing with Cards running back Kenyan Drake, who had a 100-yard game. One of the unique features is a number of additional camera angles that you can watch. You will be able to look at these while they are trading break as well. You can pause, play and navigate through the action DVR style. The video is actually very crisp, and you can customize it based on the type of broadband connection you have. If there is a problem with the video it stops and you have to wait for a moment, so it might not be the perfect way to watch games where you hang on to every play.
